

Wanted to send you all some photos to help to share this amazing and overwhelming experience.

The closer we get to the school the more primary students dressed in blue come out to greet us. Many with big smiles to our simple Jambo greeting and some being bold enough to say “Good morning” and “how are you” over and over giggling at our responses.

This little guy followed us to the school and ran around the back watching us as we toured the grounds. He isn't wearing a uniform, so he is not going to primary school like the other 1600 children that our across the school from Ngateu.

His partner in crime is pictured here

We had the fantastic experience of working with students 8/1/14. Kahli and Marilyn taught them hangman and decided to make the name more appropriately "Draw People"

Mya and Ben taught the students a game called Trash and Lisha and Lauren taught Zen doodling.

Just a few more that I can't help, but send.
